Hi Andrei, I see that you made revision to the yellow highlighted info below, so I think you might know the answer to Delon's comment {which plan goals? Stormwater or Mayor's Plan??}? Please let me know if you can figure out the answer. Thanks!

3.0 Enhancing Stormwater Capture

The UWMP projects to double the amount of stormwater capture under a conservative scenario, where centralized stormwater capture projects will increase stormwater capture by approximately 35,000 AFY for a total centralized capture of 64,000 AFY by year 2035.^[1] Centralized stormwater capture projects are large-scale operated projects that are designed specifically to infiltrate large amounts of runoff into underlying groundwater aquifers. Distributed stormwater capture projects such as dry-wells and cisterns will also provide 33,000 AFY of additional stormwater capture and infiltration/reuse in the SFB, for a total of 68,000 AFY by fiscal year ending 2035.^[2] Distributed stormwater/runoff capture refers to capturing localized dry and wet weather runoff. The Stormwater Capture Master Plan evaluated stormwater capture potential within the City. LADWP began its initial research for the Stormwater Capture Master Plan in the fall of 2013 and completed a final plan in late 2015. {which plan goals? Stormwater or Mayor's Plan??} Plan goals were integrated into LADWP's 2015 UWMP.

Andrei,

Would you please handle Delon's comments in the MWD and Rates sections.

This is time sensitive; we need to complete this today, if possible.

One of the comments questions why would inserted state stress test in MWD section.

I am not sure if we should move, because our passage covers the chronology of state mandates which affect MWD as well as DWP. I think we should keep it in that section, but if it is mentioned somewhere else, under conservation, for example, then maybe we can cut it down in the MWD section and leave the longer version in the conservation section – Please coordinate with Jin on that one, since she is handling the rest.

Thanks!
