Mr. Huerta,

I am a resident of central LA and work in Hollywood's media industry and am writing a letter of support for the Crossroads Hollywood project.

I commute through this area every day, either by car or by subway and am very familiar with the area. Currently I don't head to the specific area too often though because of the urban blight and lack of redevelopment in the area. It is not terrible interesting or inviting, and this project will probably change that by putting more space for housing and commercial uses. It will open up and revitalize public space and bring much needed dollars to local businesses and city coffers.

This project is entirely in scale and character of the neighborhood it is being built in. My only complaint is that it could be bigger and could have less parking. As we all know, the more parking, the more traffic that is created.

Thank you for reading,
