Help shape future development
The Metro Purple Line extension is a planned extension of the Purple Line subway about nine miles westward with seven new stations which will connect Westwood to downtown Los Angeles in about 25 minutes. It will carry an estimated 49,000 new passengers daily at the new stations.

To encourage livable communities and employment hubs around the region’s growing transit system, the City of Los Angeles’s Department of City Planning kicked-off an effort to adopt new development regulations to support vibrant, pedestrian-friendly neighborhoods around the first phase stations along Wilshire at La Brea, Fairfax, and La Cienega. A primary project goal is to provide local residents, business and property owners, and employees the opportunity to voice preferences for building design and development standards, public amenities, and ways to improve walkability.
